February 10th, 2019 - This may be an overstatement but it is indeed true that during that decade discussions of translation and ethics gained new momentum for example translators' visibility was debated feminist manipulative and even "cannibalistic" translation practices were brought to light and Lawrence Venuti's highly influential project of revitalising the concepts of foreignisation and domestication and the related ethics of difference was launched
